Thierry Seiller named Managing Director of the West region

Thierry Seiller, 50, joined Paprec in 2013 and has been named Managing Director of the West region. He is also joining the group's Executive Committee. A business school graduate, Thierry began his career at Sita, where he spent 18 years and held a number of different management positions, mainly in the West and Burgundy/Franche Comté regions.

After three years running a finishings and fittings company in the construction industry, he joined Paprec Group in July 2013 as Deputy Regional Director for the West region (Brittany, Pays de la Loire, Charente).

The Paprec Group has over 1,300 employees in this region, working at over 36 sites processing industrial waste and five selective waste sorting centres. The region is a showcase for the group's technologies and expertise. "Our two waste sorting centres, Paprec Trivalo Bretagne in Rennes for Paprec and Trivalis in the Vendée, operated by Coved, are the two flagships for selective collection in France. They will soon be followed in other regions by the SMDO's waste sorting centre – in the Oise département – and that of Paprec Trivalo Rhône-Alpes and Trivalo 92. Thousands of visitors flock to their educational tours every year, which is a testament to the interest of citizens in our industrial techniques," says Thierry Seiller.

"In terms of collection, we combine technical and technological skills with innovations such as incentive charging, the collection of bio-waste and automated collections," continues the new director for the region. "Finally, our coverage of the whole waste recovery chain and particularly our expertise in recycling are major assets for our industrial clients," adds Thierry Seiller. "It's wonderful to see experts in our field flourish at Paprec, both professionally and personally.

This promotion is the reward for all his excellent work for my company. Thank you, Thierry, and congratulations," says Jean-Luc Petithuguenin, founder and CEO of Paprec Group.
